Three UNCA faculty named to temporary administrative posts

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Three of UNCA's faculty members have been named to serve as part-time assistant vice chancellors for academic affairs, and a fourth faculty member will expand his responsibilities as an assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Margaret Downes, Literature and Language Department professor and chair, will coordinate faculty development activities. Alan Hantz, Mass Communication Department chair and professor, will coordinate curriculum and planning. Merritt Moseley, Literature and Language professor, will coordinate public service and special projects. Dwight Mullen, Political Science Department associate professor, will continue to coordinate cultural diversity activities as well as develop an African Studies Program.

Each of the assistant vice chancellors will teach half-time while devoting half their time to administrative responsibilities.

The changes were prompted by the recent appointments of Larry Wilson, UNCA vice chancellor for academic affairs, to interim
