

in for minor repair, she learned to her astonishment, what a very fine instrument it was. With many thanks, she returned it to me. Of course, Peggy, I gave it to you, the rightful owner. I know your Grandmother Barrett would be delighted that you have it.

Emma was an outstanding contributor to the war effort in World War II. An excellent sewer, she was one of those in charge of all the sewing done for the war effort by the Red Cross of Chondaga County. A very responsible position. She was a stunning figure in her smart "military" uniform - grey skirt and jacket, and grey peaked cap with the large red cross emblazoned on the front.

There was one great crisis in Emma's life which illustrates more than anything else, Emma's finest virtues. Joe had been a successful dentist in Syracuse for many years, but when he made some very successful investments in the stock market, he decided to retire early, and
