

moved his family to Miami Beach, Florida, where they did, indeed, live a different daily experience.
 Their "Gulf Stream Apt." complex was located directly on the water - a few steps from their door & it was ocean swimming every day.
 Every day also included several holes on one of the many beautiful golf courses. There were luncheons and dinners in gourmet restaurants and bridge games in the evening.
 The summers were spent traveling in Europe.

After seven years of this luxurious life style, suddenly, it was over.
 The stock market had "crashed".
 Emma ^{and} Joe had lost their income. The money was gone.
 It meant starting all over again.
 It meant back to Syracuse, back to renting a small office, buying new equipment, and building up a new practice. It meant Joe living with his brother Dick's family for a year. (Syracuse, my home) It meant Emma ^{and} the girls living in Detroit with Emma's sister, Clara
 - apart from Joe - for the same period of time.

Through all this turmoil Emma was steadfast - not a word of recrimination against Joe for his "unwise" investments.
