

never a complaint that the life of leisure was gone. Emma was the perfect example of "the faithful wife" - the "Rock of Gibraltar" - the foundation on which the girls were able to rebuild their lives.

Emma had an active, interesting life. She was no "rocking chair" grandmother. Of all her many roles, she was the outstanding wife and mother who took that role seriously. Although they came from very different backgrounds, Emma & my mother, Margaret Bennett, were very close friends. Emma was always close at hand, ready to share in family celebrations or ready to help in any family emergency. She was very special.
